Honoring Our Nabb Family

Many states have designated October as Family History Month. The Nabb Research Center honors its own "family" by introducing these important members of the Nabb family, our interns, graduate assistants and student staff members to you. Without their hard work and dedication, very little of the work that we do would be possible. I hope that you will join me in celebrating these most valuable members of the Nabb Research Center's family!
- Dr. G. Ray Thompson, Director and Co-Founder

My name is Ashley Ennals, and I joined the Nabb Research Center staff in 2007 as a work-study student. From Cambridge, MD, I am currently a senior majoring in finance. I perform clerical duties such as filing and data entry. My future plans include moving across the bay to Annapolis.

My name is Jess Glazer and I am a senior communication arts major, focusing on public relations. With an art minor, I try to use my creativity and imagination to enhance my work. I am also captain of the SU's women's lacrosse team. From Ellicott City, MD, I plan to travel after graduation and work in the public relations field.

Greetings! My name is Jessica St. Sulme. I am a senior from Landover, MD. I am a pursuing a double major in business and finance and a double minor in accounting and hotel management in SU's Perdue School of Business. At the current time, I am completing a Nabb internship digitalizing documents and other important material belonging to Franklin P. Perdue. I hope to use this internship to learn more about the successes and shortcomings of a successful business organization and to use those principles and standards and apply them to my own ambitions to be a self-made business woman.

My name is Julie Messick. I recently graduated from Parkside High School where, during my junior and senior years, I attended Wor-Wic Community College. This fall I transferred to SU as a political science major. I have always been interested in history and I really love the work I am doing here as an archival assistant. I have been working on a collection of items from my great-grandfather which has piqued my interest in my family's history.

My name is Kellie Mooney. As a senior public relations and marketing major, I am working at the Nabb Center on a practicum. I have been given the opportunity to write press releases on the various events with which I will be assisting. I like working in an environment where I have the opportunity to interact with the public. For me, the best fit is public relations and marketing. My dream job would be to work at a PR firm where I could help plan events and gain recognition for clients in need. With the help of SU and the Nabb Center, this practicum is allowing me to gain hands on experience and become well-rounded, which will prove to be invaluable when I graduate in May.

My name is Matthew Griffin and I came to the Nabb Research Center as a work-study student in spring 2008. A native of Salisbury, my interest in computer hardware and software has led me to pursue a degree in information systems. Never one to let my skills go to waste, I am currently working on the Nabb Research database, a future online exhibit, and minor changes to the Nabb Web site. After graduation, I hope to find a job as a computer programmer with a local company.

My name is Matt Hollis, and I am currently studying for my M.A. in history at Salisbury University. I received my B.A. at Washington College in Chestertown, MD. My interests center around East Asia, Russia and 20th century avant-garde music. My aim is to teach.

My name is Leah Hoenen. Growing up in Lewes, DE, I was surrounded by history and people who loved to share tales of their lives, local history and area people. Initially, my historical interests rested solely with large, world-altering events. But, as a reporter for the Cape Gazette, and as research assistant and oral-history coordinator at the Lewes Historical Society, my interests have broadened, and I find that I am increasingly interested in the people who make their livelihoods from and whose art is influenced by the natural areas that surround us. I have seen how history affects everyday people, and I hope that my work with Digitizing Delmarva's Heritage and Traditions will bring many such stories to Wicomico County residents.
